

OUR KELLY IS ANYTHING BUT A MISFIT

INTERVIEW BY JOEL MARASIGAN

Kelly Lynn, a blue-eyed squeeze fresh from Orlando Fla., (yes, we had to do it), is a hard-working woman and has, to no surprise, an extremely tight schedule. When we saw some of her portfolio shots we knew we needed her—so much that we sent a photography team out to the backwoods of the Sunshine State to capture her. Problem is we shot first and asked the questions later. We filled her voicemail and played a lot of phone tag and, dagnabit, she almost got away from us. Fortunately we caught her snacking at work and pulled a few minutes out of her. The time spent was well worth it; she's definitely one of the hotter models we've pinned up on our cubicle walls.

ZNR: So what's Kelly doing these days? It's so hard to reach you.

Kelly Lynn: I work at an Internet company, a service provider. I've been working 13-hour days lately—11 a.m. to midnight.

ZNR: What type of "services" are you providing?

KL: No. We provide Internet service. Internet access.

ZNR: Either way, you are working way too hard for a 24-year-old. Do you get any free time?

KL: I have the weekends off! I started working when I was 18. You're right though. My weekend free time is so scarce right now because I do a lot of photo shoots. I am working all the time, but I try to hang out with my friends.

ZNR: I saw your pictures for the cover. You are quite the hot shit.

KL: Am I on the cover? I didn't know that!

ZNR: Well damn, if you knew it was for the cover you probably would have called me back sooner!

KL: Which pictures were they?

ZNR: The ones on some backcountry dirt road.

KL: We did another location for that shoot. The photographer wasn't local, and he had to search for a good location. He finally found one, a burned-down house. We set up and started shooting. About 15 minutes into the shoot these guys from next door slowly started coming out to see what was going on. It started small, but it became a decent crowd of beer-holding guys. They all just hung out, watching and yelling out comments. What we didn't know before we set up was the burned-down house was right next to their strip club! All the patrons came outside and wouldn't leave.

ZNR: What a great opportunity to get some dollars tucked in your shirt!

KL: We wanted them to leave! They were yelling out things like, "We know you can smile; just smile damn it!" We had to give the guys some Polaroids to make them go away. I was like, "There are naked girls inside; shouldn't you be in there?"

ZNR: What a terrible strip club. The girls inside must have been fugly to have had all those guys walk out and watch a fully clothed girl shoot pictures. It must have felt weird for you to have dudes just watching.

KL: No. I kinda tuned it out. While I'm working I'm oblivious to the things around me.

ZNR: What's the best part of modeling?

KL: Getting my makeup and hair done.

ZNR: Are you high or low maintenance?

KL: I would say medium. I don't really dress up. The only time I get to go all out is during the photo shoots. That's why I like them so much.

ZNR: What do you consider the hottest part of your body?

KL: My face and my expression; I'm always smiling. I think that's what catches people the most.

ZNR: I've seen your bikini pictures and your smile wasn't the first thing I noticed.

What would guys think is the hottest?

KL: I would hope my smile!

ZNR: OK, enough, you're in Orlando not Vatican City.

KL: OK. I would think it's my stomach. I have a really nice stomach.

ZNR: Let me guess: You don't ever work out.

KL: Well, I don't have a routine. I work out about a week out of the month.

ZNR: I'm looking over your measurements and you have a really small waist.

KL: I also have a weird bust size.

ZNR: Please go on.

KL: Being a 33 is odd because bras come in 32 or 34. I'm either too big or too small.

ZNR: With a C cup, big or small will look great. What makes you sexy?

KL: I think my confidence and my outgoing personality make me a little sexy.

ZNR: I would have said your legs. What guy qualities turn you on?

KL: Honesty. Faithfulness. And the number one thing is a sense of humor—a sarcastic sense of humor.

ZNR: That's it? What does he have to look like, and what can you deal with?

KL: I don't like the model-looking guys at all. There's too much maintenance with them. I don't like guys who are too beefed up. I like average, everyday, real guys. I could deal with a few extra pounds. But they have to be taller than me.

ZNR: Which movie star turns your head?

KL: I'm going to get killed for this, but I like Vin Diesel.

ZNR: Captain Fast and Furious? Mr. Pacifier? That's everything you told me you didn't like.

KL: No, no, no. There's something special about Vin. I think it's his voice.

ZNR: Is it his barely perceptible gay lisp wrapped in a New York City accent and contradicting stage name?

KL: I'm thinking the Pitch Black Vin. I've heard the rumors, and I don't think he's gay.

ZNR: Accept what you need to. Who did you have pinned up on your wall when you were growing up?

KL: Cory Haim.

ZNR: Funny how tastes stay the same. What kind of music are you into?

KL: It's something a lot of people listen to but few admit: I listen to a lot of '80s music. I grew up with it. I love The Cure, Morrissey, Depeche Mode. I'm also into hip hop—but none of the new stuff or the southern hip hop. I like groups like Camp Lo, and the older Jay-Z and Nas.

ZNR: What do you have planned for yourself in the next five years?

KL: I'll do modeling as long as I'm still having fun. Getting my makeup done and seeing the finished product is the best part.

ZNR: If you weren't modeling, what would you be doing?

KL: I don't know.

ZNR: What about acting?

KL: I was offered stuff for independent movies, but I can't act.

ZNR: I've seen lots of hot chicks bumbling about on the big screen. Who knows. One hot outfit, an action movie and a bunch of short lines like, "Oh my God! The President has been hit!" or "Everybody get down!" It could be something.

KL: I'd be seen by a lot of people. Why would I put myself out there if I were a bad actress?

ZNR: How about the money?

KL: I'd get fired.
